The pay mirasdar doing any work thereon so far as the respondent is concerned, he ought to get the office every alternate year & there is no question of his officiating only every third year as now contended by the petitioner. There is also the practice followed all these years as could be seen from the extracts from the transfer & character register for the period 1903 to 1935. The petitioner has therefore no claim to service in 2 in a period of 34 years but to officiate only every alternate year (as was the case when his father was alive, two* barawards counting as one year's service out of every two).
